BIOGRAPHY

(Maayke Schuitema)

Artist Maayke Schuitema (The Hague, 1974) lives in Wassenaar (The Netherlands) and works in The Hague. She grew up in an artistic family. Her grandfather, Paul Schuitema, was an international renowned graphic designer and photographer. Her father, Etsko Schuitema, also trained as a graphic designer, was of great influence of the development of Maayke as an artist. Dutch painter Bonies is an uncle of Maayke's and his son, Maayke's cousin, Jiri Nieuwenhuis also is painter. Especially when she was younger, he was an important role model for her. A natural development of skill and technique became the foundation of Maayke Schuitema's art. This is the sign of a doubtless visual talent.

From 1985 to 1989 Maayke studies classical dance at the Royal Conservatorium in The Hague. Those years were an important experience, because the connection between body posture, empathy and state of mind are important aspects of her later artwork. In 1992 she graduated from the Rijnlands Lyceum in Wassenaar. Until 1994 Maayke Schuitema became a student of Painting/Graphic/Autonomy at the Royal Academy of fine arts in The Hague. In 1997 she started to run an advertising agency. In this period she developed thorough knowledge of typography and design, her personal passions. Those elements later found their way into her autonomous work. During a collaboration with artist Marjolein van Haasteren (1998 – 2002), they made working on commission their main goal. In 2002 Maayke started to work for herself. This was a conscious choice, the challenge was to combine graphic art and painting in autonomous work. Her calling as an artist became clear quite early, she just took a detour getting there.

The subject of her art is Maayke herself. A woman and her relation to her direct environment. Because of the autobiographic character, her work is intimately connected to her profession as an artist. There is a delicate balance that has been developed out of the observation of the diverse roles of women throughout their lives; partner, mother, daughter and always the option of the strong woman. Maayke's work has been exhibited extensively (inter)nationally and is to be found in major corporate collections, as well as many private collections. She is a member of the jury Paul Schuitema Award, granted by the Royal Art Academy of The Hague, and committee member of the Hague Pulchri Studio, a well-known Dutch artist's society.
